

University of Groningen

Arab unity in terms of law

Anabtawi, Munzer Fayek

IMPORTANT NOTE: You are advised to consult the publisher's version (publisher's PDF) if you wish to cite from it. Please check the document version below.

Document Version

Publisher's PDF, also known as Version of record

Publication date:

1962

Link to publication in University of Groningen/UMCG research database

Citation for published version (APA):

Anabtawi, M. F. (1962). Arab unity in terms of law. s.n.

Copyright

Other than for strictly personal use, it is not permitted to download or to forward/distribute the text or part of it without the consent of the author(s) and/or copyright holder(s), unless the work is under an open content license (like Creative Commons).

Take-down policy

If you believe that this document breaches copyright please contact us providing details, and we will remove access to the work immediately and investigate your claim.

Downloaded from the University of Groningen/UMCG research database (Pure): <http://www.rug.nl/research/portal>. For technical reasons the number of authors shown on this cover page is limited to 10 maximum.

FOREWORD

In this thesis an attempt has been made to investigate the extent to which the Concept of Arab unity has been implemented in inter-Arab states legal relations. With this object in mind the book has been divided into two main parts. The first part presents the concept of Arab unity as it evolved around the middle of the 19th century until the late 1950s. In tracing the development of this concept the present writer has in the main consulted Arab nationalist writers on the subject. In the second part an attempt has been made to examine the more important approaches so far pursued by the Arab states to achieve comprehensive unity. In the last chapter more evidence of the notion of Arab unity was sought in the domestic laws of the Arab states.

This work has been made possible by the grants which emanated from the Netherlands Universities Foundation for International Cooperation and the Department of International Cultural Relations at the Netherlands Ministry of Education, and I wish to express my sincere gratitude for these grants. My thanks are particularly due to Prof. E. de Vries, Rector of the Institute of Social Studies in the Hague and to Miss E. Talsma, senior official in the Department of International Cultural Relations at the Netherlands Ministry of Education. I would also like to thank the Department of International Cultural Relations of the Ministry of Education for their grant which enabled me to have this thesis printed in its present form. I should also like to thank Mr. M. de Niet, chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Institute of Social Studies and Dr. J. In't Veld, chairman of the faculty of Public Administration at the Institute for their unfailing support and encouragement ever since the time when the performance of this work was no more than an intention and a prospect.

I wish to thank Mr. S. Nawfal, Assistant Secretary-General of the League of Arab States; Director and Staff of the Economic Department of the League; the Director and Staff of the Legal Department of the League; the Director of the Secretariat of the League; the Directors and Staff of the Arab League Offices in Bonn, Germany and Geneva, Switzerland; the Ministry of Information of the Provisional Government of the Algerian Republic, the UAR Embassy at the Hague; the Legal Department at the Iraqi Ministry of Justice; and the many friends in the Arab world who never failed to supply me with the available documents which I needed in the preparation of this work.

