Syllabus and Schedule - Winter 2008

Julia Sapin

Course Description

This course offers a chance to think about the ways in which museums, galleries, and other sites of exhibition have functioned and continue to function in society. What is exhibited and why? Who is doing the exhibiting? How are the objects that are exhibited being interpreted and why? How does the stage of the exhibition change one's perspective about what is being viewed?

While developing consciousness of these and other questions through readings, field trips, and class discussions, we will be staging an exhibition ourselves with the help of Western Gallery Director Dr. Sarah Clark-Langager and Western Gallery Preparator Paul Brower. Preparing the exhibition will involve learning different types of writing and other forms of communication used in exhibition settings, such as lighting, construction of gallery space, and arrangement of objects. The exhibition will be held Spring 2008 in one room of the Western Gallery.

The objects will be chosen from the Al and Vera Leese Collection, which was recently gifted to Western by their daughter, Mrs. Marian Boylan. We will be collaborating with photographer Dianne Kornberg and with Montréal Danse Artistic Director Kathy Casey. Kornberg's work will be the subject of a traveling exhibition in the larger of the exhibition rooms Spring 2008. Montréal Danse will be in residence at WWU during Spring 2008 and will use the Western Gallery as a performance and dialogue space.
